Psalm 130: With the Lord There Is Mercy

The Harvest is Plenty

The last 500 seeds of corn were planted last Monday. Over 4000 seeds were planted over the past three weeks. Either we will have kept some squirrels, birds and wood chucks well-fed, or we might actually have fresh sweet corn in the fall. Or both. Many thanks to all those who helped with this project and plant the corn: OSU Extension, the six fine young men from The Lantern, Ron Sonby, Kevin Sonby, Kevin Sonby, Jr., Elle Sonby and Stephen Povlis.

This project is phase four of urban farming and going green. Phase one was the community garden. Phase two was the fruit trees in the edible forest. Phase three is the planting of other crops throughout the edible forest and phase four is the corn field. In the fall, beans will be planted to restore the nitrogen to the soil.

Paul Corbett, our arborist, gave me a guided tour of the fruit trees. There are cherries almost ready to eat. Apples and nectarines and plums and peaches are growing in abundance. Some trees that did not bear fruit last year are bearing fruit this year. And two trees have died and will need to be replaced in the fall.

Outside the fence the walnut, pecan and almond trees have taken off. They will begin bearing nuts in 5 to 10 years.

Huge strawberries got picked last Tuesday from the Community Garden. Vegetable beds were dug and a new bed along the fence was made. Planting began Tuesday with the help of BPDC youth outreach. Before you know it we will have tomatoes, and peas and carrots and onions and peppers and eggplants.

Paul Corbett has singlehandedly begun phase three of the edible forest. Paul planted squash and watermelon and zucchini along the perimeter of the fence. This layered approach to a self-sustaining forest that is edible will expand next year. People in the parish and in the neighborhood will be given the opportunity to have their own plot of land for growing organic food.

Tom and Carolyn Simmonds have graciously tutored young people doing community service in the art of gardening. This work is labor intensive and young fresh strong bodies are greatly appreciated and needed. If you would like to volunteer to help, even once, during the summer, please let them know. They would be most appreciative.

Flowers have bloomed throughout the property. Thanks to all those who have made our grounds attractive, the Wards, the Ruppes, the Simmonds, the Arqueros, and Joan Francis. Your work makes us all look good.

Jesus used many illustrations from agriculture and the plant kingdom to describe the reign of God; fig trees, mustard seeds, vineyards, sowers and seeds, weeds and wheat, etc. A successful harvest takes a long time, sometimes years, even decades. Good planning is imperative. But help is always needed. “The harvest is ready, the laborers are few” is a passage often heard in regards to spreading the good news. The same is true on our parish grounds.

So come some morning or some Saturday and see what you can do. That reminds me of another bible verse from St. Paul to the Thessalonians. Those who do not work should not eat.

THINKING ABOUT STEPHEN MINISTRY Our next step in beginning a Stephen Ministry here is to identify four members of our community to attend a Leader’s Training Course in Pittsburgh, PA, Aug. 5-11. They will learn how to train others in everything needed for this caring ministry—how to be an effective listener, specific techniques for ministering to grieving people, and more. When our Leaders return they will begin a class here to train people to be our Stephen Ministers. If you are feeling a call toward Leader’s Training or as a Stephen Minister talk to Katie Corbett. To learn more visit www.stephenministries.org
